Vavasour sank, downward, downward, till the loose trail of her floating hair was beaten beneath the billows. A moment, and he knew what he had done. An agony of horror fell upon him, he plunged down again into the depths--again and yet again, --he swept the waters with his arm; he searched for her in vain search; he grasped the gliding waves, the salt and slippery foam: --that was all! Darkness fell over the ocean, and darkness as of the night covered his own soul, which for one hour of travail and of martyrdom had soared upward to Gods light, and had failed in the supreme instant of victory, in the crowning ordeal of temptation. She had been his temptress again, and again he had fallen; again through her he knew himself accursed! And on his face a great misery gathered, for the weight...
