Brand New Book  Print on Demand .Excerpt from St. Andrews Ghost Stories Many years ago, about the time of the Tay Bridge gale, I was staying at Edinburgh with a friend of mine, an actor manager. I had just come down from the paint-room of the theatre, and was emerging from the stage-door, when I encountered Miss Elsie H, a then well-known actress. You are just the very person I wanted to meet, she said. Allow me to introduce you to my friend, Mr Spencer Ashton. He s not an actor, he s an artist, and he s got such a queer, queer story about ghosts and things near your beloved St Andrews. I bowed to Mr Ashton, who was a quiet-looking man, pale and thin, rather like a benevolent animated hairpin. He reminded me somehow of Fred Vokes. We shook hands warmly. Yes, he said, my story sounds like fiction, but it is a fact, as I can prove. It is rather long, but it may possibly interest you. Where could we foregather? Come and dine with me at the Edinburgh Hotel to-night at eight. I ll get a private room, I said. Right oh! said he, and we parted. That evening at eight o clock we met at the old Edinburgh Hotel (now no longer in existence), and after dinner he told me his very remarkable tale. Some years ago, he said, I was staying in a small coast town in Fife, not very far from St Andrews. I was painting some quaint houses and things of the sort that tickled my fancy at the time, and I was very much amused and excited by some of the bogie tales told...
