Every thing succeeds according to my most sanguine wishes, and the sunshine of success gilds my prospers. I begin to hope, that I shall go through this enterprize without a single disappointment; what a novelty will that be to me! When I take a retrospective view of my life, I find misfortune ushering in every great event; but I think she is now tired of her office, and means to give me some little respite: that she may never cross your path, -is the sincere prayer of him, who, with the truest affection, bids you adieu, and must ever remain Your grateful V. LUNARDJ. LETTER III. Edinburgh, Sept. 28. 1785, My Dear Guardian, SHARE my joy; participate my pleasures! ScotLand cannot boast a happier man than your friend. I can assure you, that I rife some inches taller to take a more extensive view...
