*This publication will never be straightforward to get going on looking at but really fun to see. This can be for all those who statte that there had not been a worth looking at. You wont really feel monotony at at any moment of your own time (that's what catalogs are for about should you request me).

The lachrymal sac was apparently unaffected, the naso-lachrymal duct was patent; right eye normal. During the two weeks following the patient was treated every second day in the clinic with a weak solution of corrosive sublimate and careful cleansing of the conjunctiva; the eye was washed out several times a day at home. Later, applications, first of powdered boric acid, then of iodoform, were made and all without the slightest effect on the progress. She was then sent to the rhinologist, who found a cystic turbinate with an accompanying rhinitis and probable involvement of the ethmoidal cells. The turbinate was removed and the nose cleansed frequently, which seemed to have a favorable effect on the conjunctivitis. Nevertheless the latter did not entirely disappear, and when the patient was last seen, after two months of treatment, there was still a considerable amount of conjunctival injection and discharge, although she had attended the clinic faithfully and the most varied remedies had been tried. At the first visit a smear was made from the discharge and stained by Gram. The discharge consisted of pus corpuscles and cell detritus, and contained a large number of moderate sized gram-negative bacilli, which were often arranged in pairs, end to end. These bacilli were surrounded by a wide mucoid capsule. Cultures were then made on agar, blood serum and potato. No. 1. Agar slant. After 36 hours in the thermostat, several large, round, elevated, whitish-gray colonies could be seen, the largest one measuring about 2mm. in diameter. They were soft and...
